“ Where to begin: We were first singing partners, then we dated, then we went our separate ways, only to be joined again and marry and have a wonderful, beautiful son (he looks just like you!) We shared many good times, along with troubled times, but we overcame them and became friends again. I never once thought things would end this way, but The Lord allowed you and Cory (the name you gave him) to mend your father/son relationship. Know you will be missed, remembered, and loved.

Always, Vanessa

“ I gave you life and watched you grow from child to teenager to adult to husband to father to grandfather and assumed I would watch you grow to old age. That was never to be, but you will live on forever in my heart, my mind, my entire being. Nothing can fill the void that your passing has left in my life until we meet on the other side.

“ How can I put all these emotions and memories into a single message? We shared far too much for far too many years for it to fit in such a tiny place. I'm gonna miss you, cuz. I am so gonna miss you.

“ Dad, very few words can express the pain that's held with losing you. It doesn't feel right that I should lose my dad at such a young age, bit through all this I find comfort and strength knowing that God is Sovereign. He allowed us to mend a broken relationship in just a short time. He allowed that bond to be there again which I figured would never be. I can take refuge in Christ because I know we will meet again. I love you dad and ill see you again in our Father's mansion. Meanwhile, hold a spot close for the the rest of us. I really do pray that your enjoying the presence of Christ.

Love,

Cory Lee Allen Brumley
